President's Message to the Class of 2012

In his charge to graduates to conclude Commencement ceremonies, Elon University President Leo M. Lambert encouraged graduates to use their education as a force for good in the world.

"You have all been prepared in the great liberal arts tradition to possess incredibly important and useful skills, such as writing, research, analysis, persuasion, and critical thinking," Lambert said. "You've combined these with strong majors and experiences in the world through international study, community engagement, and leadership challenges that have positioned you for success. And today, of all days, you should be proud of your success and your competence."

He then asked graduates to remember the virtue of humility in all that they do with their lives, citing how fortunate they are compared to the world's overall population to have a degree from a liberal arts institution.

"I hope that privilege keeps you feeling humble and mindful of your responsibility to others in the wider world lacking food, basic health care, peace, justice, and even the barest opportunity to create a better world for their kids. Never be afraid to reach out to others to help them create meaningful and positive change in their lives. This is what your Elon education compels you to do."

Lambert shared with graduates the meaning behind a young oak sapling that each member of the Class of 2012 received as a gift from the Office of Alumni Engagement following the ceremony. "Plant your young tree, and let it serve as a reminder that you have been prepared by your education to be a strong force for good in the world," he said. "Remember too that we are the Phoenix. We have faith in the promise of renewal and of new beginnings. God bless and Godspeed."

"Long live Elon!"

The Corporation for National & Community Service named Elon to the 2012 President's Honor Roll for service efforts to America's communities.

I constantly hear my advisor saying, "Elon students operate at a higher caliber than most university students." I would have to say, I do agree. Everywhere on campus, students are engaging themselves in all sorts of projects, organizations and, of course, schoolwork. Whether an Honors Fellow is working on their thesis or a member of a sorority is putting together signs for an upcoming philanthropy event, Elon students are always on the go. Who knows if its the beautiful weather that keeps us motivated or the amazing professors that are constantly pushing us to do better than we think we can, but whatever it is, it sure is working. But don't worry, we have our fair share of fun too! On any given sunny day, you are sure to see a group of boys playing basketball outside HBB or girls sunning themselves next to Lake Mary Nell. SUB makes sure to entertain the students with Movies On The Lawn and Midnight Meals; our amazing a cappella groups will serenade with their beautiful voices at their numerous concerts throughout the year. Elon students take any chance to show off their talent and cheer on others. Whatever students are doing, they will always find a place to bELONG here.

move-in day

Everyone is nervous for the first day of school, no matter how old you are! But, there is also the excitement of the possibilities the new school year will bring. Everyone could sense the tension on Move-In Day; the nervous smiles of new first year students said it all. But O-Team and Orientation Leaders were there every step of the way, helping to make this day as easy as it could be, from hauling suitcases across the new Colonnades quad to lifting endless Target bags, filled with all the comforts of home, up narrow staircases. By the end of the day, all the nervousness that new students may have felt were quickly overcome by tired arms and feet. It was an amazing day and everyone could not wait to see what else Elon had in store for them!

Orientation

I was not sure what to expect when I signed up last February to be an Orientation Leader, but I quickly found a home within the program. The enthusiasm of the students on Head Staff was contagious and soon I, as well as the other Orientation Leaders, could not wait for the arrival of this year's first-year class. The days of training week were filled with bonding activities and ones that would successfully prepare us to welcome and guide our new students into the Elon community. Through my experience as an Orientation Leader, I was able to strengthen my leadership skills, as well as build on my organizational and public speaking skills. Additionally, Orientation fostered the formation of new friendships, and I came into my sophomore year with many new NSO friends!

It was a beautiful Carolina day as Young Commons filled with students searching to find their niche here at Elon. One of the things I have noticed at Elon is that everyone is involved in a multitude of organizations, ranging from Cooking Club to Invisible Children. Walking around, you could not help but notice the pride that each person had by representing his or her organization. Some handed out food, others put on impromptu concerts just to entice new students to join. By the end of the day, some may have signed up for 10 clubs and organizations, with hands filled with miscellaneous cups and flyers with the hope that they will find their place on campus.

“Corey Smith? Who’s Corey Smith?” That is the question everyone was asking this summer when the Homecoming Concert was announced. Well not anymore. Smith’s tunes that dealt with love, break-ups, race and alcohol caught the attention of all the Elon students who attended. His cover of “It’s a Great Day To Be Alive” had the crowd singing at the top of their lungs and his final song, a mash up, ended the night on a high note for everyone. Corey Smith was a sensational performer and Elon would welcome him and his witty lyrics back to campus any day!

homecoming Week

Reunions always bring back the fond memories of college years. Homecoming 2011 would bring back all kinds of classes and organizations celebrating landmark reunions. The class of 1961 came back after 50 years away from Elon and found it to be just as special as it had been the first day they arrived. On Friday evening, students and alumni alike attended Rally Elon, which celebrated the university reaching its fund raising goal of $100 million. The next day, everyone gathered again at Rhodes Stadium to watch our football team take on University of Tennessee Chattanooga. During halftime, students cheered as E.J. Young and Ashton Vincenty were crowned as Homecoming King and Queen. The whole week, alumni and students shared in the excitement this time of year and it truly was one of the best.

Every year on the first week of December, the Elon community gathers at the Alamance Fountain to experience one of Elon's oldest and most cherished traditions: the Luminaries. All day students assist in lining the pathways with lanterns and the trees are strung with white lights to get our campus into the holiday spirit. All wait with bated breath for the dark campus to be illuminated by a sea of white lights. Carols are sung and cider is sipped as students, faculty, staff, alumni and friends chatter away. The Luminaries give us a chance to lift up our spirits in the face of exams and remind us of the holidays that are right around the corner.

“What’s up, Elon?” Mac Miller shouted into the microphone. Hundreds of students answered him. A beat dropped, the lights exploded and Miller launched into one of his songs. Elon University’s Spring Show, presented by the Student Union Board, became a rapid success as mashup duo The White Panda and rapper Miller were welcomed to the stage in Alumni Gym. Mac Miller, who is kicking off his Macadelic 2012 International Tour with The Cool Kids and The Come Up, performed shortly after The White Panda. Though Miller was not feeling well enough for a pre-show interview, he regained his energy for the performance — energy that was an important constant for both groups that performed. The concert’s atmosphere was that of a big house party with celebrity DJs. For students looking to unwind from the stress of schoolwork, they had certainly come to the right place. During the fall semester, the Student Union Board presented a survey to Elon students, asking them who they would like to come perform for the community. The artists’ names were revealed in February. “Mac Miller was the highest open response that we had on the survey that was in our price range,” said senior Jenna Thrash, music chair for SUB.

elonthon

ELONTHON is an experience like no other. We like to call it a party with a purpose! There are plenty of fun things to do like play video games, zumba, listen to a cappella groups, and of course dancing! I am so lucky to have been a part of Exec 2012, as they are one of the most innovative, cooperative group of leaders I have ever worked with. After a year of being with each other we all still love each other and raising the total of $105,000 at the end of the event when no one thought we could do it was such an incredible feeling. Different this year was that we raised the total at the event which we usually raise three weeks after the event! This means we had three less weeks to fundraise! Our exec and committee members were receptive to big changes and we implemented online fundraising, a video at the beginning of every shift, and overall an event that appealed to a variety of people. I specifically interacted with the families as Families Relations Chair and this for me is the reason why I dance. These kids have been through so much and the least I can do is show my support. # Changes On Campus

University Relations

[under the oaks]

Walking through campus, it is impossible to miss the sounds of construction vehicles in the distance. We have all experienced having to walk the extra five minutes to Lindner because of not being able to cut across the front of the Pavilions or having stared out of the windows of Irazu to see the iron railings staring back at you. But we resist the urge to complain, knowing that in the end, our campus will be just another step above the beauty it already exudes. From the new Colonnades dorms to the Student Professional Development Center, Elon is updating every aspect of our lives here, ensuring that Elon is here to stay.

BETH MCKIE | [student life section editor]

We are a school built on traditions. Between common traditions like College Coffee and College Chapel to our once a year Luminaries and Holiday at the President's House during the holiday season, these help to keep us rooted. Elon is progressing forward, reinventing our school so it may be the best it can. But it is with those traditions that help us to remember our humble beginnings. Seniors will begin to hear this as their final days come to an end: "You must remember where you came from to know where you are going." Our traditions will forever remain so that all students and alumni may remember Elon's past.

Judith Jameson, who was chosen to speak as part of the Isabella Cannon Distinguished Visiting Professor of Leadership Lecture Series, reinforced the idea that passion is the "key" to being successful. This year Residence Life has been all about changes. North Area, an area where many seniors and juniors made their first memories at Elon, was only half standing. Story Center was torn down to build the new Global Dining hall leaving Harper Center still standing for its last year. To celebrate its final year, the North Area Council and RSA put on the biggest Polar Bear Plunge that Elon has ever seen. Many students were calling it the Finale. Although North Area will be sincerely missed, new memories were made all year in the brand new Colonnades buildings. To keep tradition alive, the old names of North Area, Staley, Moffitt, Harper, Colclough, Chandler, and Maynard, have all been recycled, renaming the new Colonnades and a few of the Daniele Center flats. Finally, Residence Life was getting ready for the new Station at Mill Point to open in August 2012. The cadets go through extensive training to prepare themselves for Warrior Forge, a 4 week evaluation course. Cadets attend Warrior Forge in the summer between their junior and senior year. Throughout the year the cadets will both plan and actively run training events that range from leading squads of 8-12 other cadets to leading companies of 20-50 cadets. Phoenix Company is a subordinate company under the Aggie Battalion which is headquartered at North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro. As a part of the Aggie Battalion the cadets of Phoenix Company train regularly with student-soldiers from Guilford College, Greensboro College, UNCG, High Point, and Bennett College. Intersect 2012: Diversity and Leadership Conference

I have learned a lot by working in the Multicultural Center. Diversity Education is an important aspect of every college student's career. We need to learn and understand the different dynamics of the word "diversity" and what it encompasses. I worked on the Diversity and Leadership Conference. I find this to be so important because it teaches the many leaders at Elon how to be a leader in a diverse setting. At the conference we had different workshops that tackled diversity and leadership head on. Many students were able to take in knowledge that would not have in an ordinary classroom. I feel empowered by knowing that I have instilled pertinent knowledge into many Elon students.

My position as Assistant Recruitment Director entails me to select and train Pi Chis (recruitment counselors) that will serve as leaders for the incoming women going through the recruitment process. # Student media

Student media at Elon provides an outlet for creativity that otherwise might never be realized. Each year, Elon's media organizations allow students to reach a limitless audience through videos and television programs, newsprint, radio productions, and more. This year, the student media story that caused the most buzz revolved around a Pendulum article published in a December newspaper where an underage student was quoted, supposedly with permission, as having a fake ID that she used to get into Elon bars and purchase alcohol. After publication, she faced a Student Conduct investigation with caused The Pendulum to fire back with a "Hypocrisy Exposed" editorial accusing Elon of violating First Amendment rights to free speech. This caused an uproar around campus with students and professors writing letters to the editor in protest. The other media organizations on campus may not have caused a similar splash, but they still made headlines. Elon's radio station, WSOE, continued to air "The Carnal Romp," Elon's only sex talk show, which caused some debate this year, its first full year, with shows covering topics such as sex positions. Limelight Records, Elon's student-run record label, worked hard this year to finally become recognized by the Media Board. In the fall, Colonnades, Elon's literary magazine, was named a Pacemaker finalist for the second time and Phi Psi Cli, Elon's Yearbook, won several awards for the 2011 book. Finally, Phoenix 14, a part of Elon Student Television, attended the Radio Television Digital News Association of the Carolinas' convention and won several awards for their show.

My experience in Sweet Signatures has been life-changing. I can't even describe what it feels like to be surrounded by some of the most incredible, talented women I know every week and create beautiful music. Since auditions are the first week of school, the members of Sweet Sigs were some of my first friends on campus. Even though it is only my second year in the group, we have already been able to be a part of some amazing events. We have sung at a wedding while the bride walked down the aisle, during a marriage proposal, at high schools, and of course for various events around campus such as Midnight Meals, Greek life philanthropy events, and much more. We and other members of a cappella groups at Elon are often recognized around campus and I'm proud to say I'm a member of Sweet Sigs. It's a lot of work rehearsing at least six hours a week, trying to learn new music, arranging songs, and trekking to gigs around North Carolina (and even a few gigs in Florida!) but it is absolutely worth every second of my time and I wouldn't give it up for the world. This spring, we will be recording Sweet Signature's first Christmas album to be released next winter and I can't wait!

academics

Named the number two Southern University in the 2012 “America’s Best Colleges” guide, Elon academics are definitely a cut above the rest. With over 60 majors and hundreds of extracurricular activities offered on campus, Elon presents more for incoming students than just stellar academics. The incoming freshman class for the 2011-2012 school year had an average GPA of 3.9, which shows just how outstanding the students are. Not only does Elon have challenging courses with outstanding professors, 86% of which have a PhD or other top degrees, but it also offers opportunities beyond the classroom including undergraduate research, studying abroad, service learning, and internships. Elon University has a lot to present its students with, including close relationships with faculty and a strong sense of community.

The College of Arts and Sciences provides students with various options in areas of study ranging from Dance and English to Political Science and Biochemistry. With 40 fields, Elon students are able to choose and even create their particular major and minor. This year, students across the College of Arts and Sciences had noteworthy accomplishments. 'Hair: The American Tribal Love-Rock Musical', a musical that is currently traveling across the country, was performed by students in the Department of Performing Arts. In International Studies news, freshman Omolayo Ojo, a native of Nigeria, became an American citizen in October. This year, four new majors and a new minor were introduced to the college curriculum including Information Science, Early Childhood Education, Public Health Studies and Arts Administration. These new majors give students even more opportunities to follow their passion while at Elon. The College of Arts and Sciences allows students to pursue numerous career options with the many majors and minors it provides. With the addition of Elon's Learning Requirements of Study Abroad Programs, Academic Service-Learning, Leadership Development, Undergraduate Research and Internships, students are able to further enhance their college careers and create a start to their success.

School of business

The Martha and Spencer Love School of Business serves more than 20% of the Elon undergraduate body. Even though that means there are well over 1,000 students learning within Koury Business Center each week, there always familiar faces around. You'll often see people in study groups, mingling in the hallways, or talking after classes. The professors also have close relationships with many of their students, which is easily noticed when looking inside the always open office doors. While the atmosphere is casual within the business school, there is always an obvious sense of professionalism. It is as common to see students in professional attire as it is to see them in gym shorts and t-shirts. This professionalism extends to successful student-run workshops and events. Elon's business students have also found success in numerous state-wide, national, and international competitions. The trophy case as you enter the building, the banners occasionally hanging from the walls, and the posts on E-Net represent just some of LSB student successes. It's easy to see why Elon was recognized as the 26th ranked program in terms of undergraduate academic quality and the 19th ranked Entrepreneurship program in the country.

Communications

Elon's School of Communications teaches students to become effective communicators who contribute to today's digital global age through thought and various forms of media. Around 1,000 students, about 20 percent of Elon's undergraduate enrollment, major in Communications. Elon's communications program, along with 17 other communications programs at private colleges and universities in the United States, is nationally accredited by ACEJMC, the highest level of program quality in mass communications and journalism. This year the School of Communications has added a new major, Sport and Event Management, to the four other majors offered through the program: Journalism, Strategic Communications, Communication Science and Media Arts and Entertainment. Professional internships are a graduation requirement that encourage students to seek experience outside the classroom. Elon offers summer communications programs in Los Angeles and New York as well as opportunities much closer to home on Elon's campus. Communications students participate in student organizations including Elon's weekly newspaper, The Pendulum, the school radio program, WSOE, the student-run communications agency, Live Oak, and the student yearbook, Phi Psi Cli. Forty faculty members help guide students to realize their potential impact on the world around them and have contributed to building a strong communications program that is evident through most aspects of everyday Elon life.

One of the most outstanding and notable programs offered at Elon is the School of Education. The famous saying, "A good teacher is like a candle - it consumes itself to light the way for others" stands to be proven true, for while embarking down the route of the Department of Education, students will not only learn from professors who will steadfastly guide them, but they also blossom into the teachers who continue to inspire. As senior Corey Hutkin loves to tell, "The faculty have provided me with the most relevant tools for my success as a future educator." While at Elon, students can earn degrees in early childhood, elementary, middle grades, secondary and special education. In addition, the graduate program offers concentrations in elementary, special and gifted education. When asked about her first year involved with the Teaching Fellows, freshman Amanda Holt claims, "Coming to the School of Education is like coming into a family." Regardless of where a student aspires to work in the field of education, the most important aspect to understand is that the Department of Education is truly comprised of some of the most brilliant and commendable faculty and dedicated students.

At Elon, study abroad is usually a question of when, not if. Summer is a time students often spend on international adventures, building upon academic and extracurricular experiences. "Participating in the summer service trip to Morocco was one of the best decisions I have ever made," junior Heather Cassano said. "I had the opportunity to meet Moroccans my age and discuss stereotypes and current events. I visited many different cities, experienced some of both the traditional and modern culture, and made life long friends." For many, the months between spring and fall semesters are ideal for travel. "Using the Kernodle Center as an opportunity to study abroad was a great way for me to experience a different country without having the time or the funds to spend an entire semester in Morocco," she said. Experiences abroad offer students new perspectives, and encourage a deeper appreciate for international exposure. The trip inspired me to write a new study abroad proposal and continue to travel abroad. The opportunities these service trips provide is one of a kind, and this experience is one of my favorites at Elon."

Term Study abroad

I love studying abroad for Winter Term. You get to see the highlights of the places you are visiting while learning about the culture and environment surrounding you. It is also great travelling with students from Elon because the friendships can continue once back on campus. This year I did my second Winter Term abroad trip and travelled to Peru. It was a fast paced trip, including almost daily 5 am wake up calls, but we got to see so much of the country. We encountered a good mix of city life, including Lima, Cuzco, and Arequipa, with rural life, such as a homestay on Amantani, an largely agricultural island where electricity is rare. We went to a weaving district and watched experts make gorgeous textiles. We braved the weather and climbed to the peak overlooking Machu Picchu. We tested our bargaining skills in Spanish during visits to hectic markets and for the most part, walked away victors (in our minds at least). Overall, studying abroad for Winter Term is an experience I would recommend to everyone and I will be sad once I leave Elon and will no longer have the opportunity to study abroad for Winter Term.

"We should probably go sit with them." The Role of College Access Programs in the Social Lives of Students

Molly O'Brien, (Faculty Mentor: Dr. Deborah Long)
Department of Anthropology

ABSTRACT

This research examines the role of college access programs in the social environment in which students live. It explores how these programs serve as a critical link in how adolescents and young adults navigate their social lives. Through participant observation and in-depth interviews, this research explores what influences the Elac Academy has on the peer group development of its students. Analysis of the data collected from this research showed that peer groups within the program are formed primarily on the foundations of gender, sexual orientation, and age, while race is of little to no importance.

METHODOLOGY

In order to complete this research, I conducted four weeks of participatory observation and 10 semi-structured interviews with participants based on the Elon Academy. I selected my interviewees based on stratified convenience sampling. I interviewed two scholars - at least one male and at least one female - from each of the five Elon Academy classes. The participants represented a range of ethnicities including African American, Hispanic, Asian American, biracial, and white. Throughout participatory research, I took fieldnotes documenting observations and experiences living among the scholars for the duration of the four-week summer session.

RESULTS & CONCLUSION

This research yielded four primary conclusions: (1) To a certain extent, there is a dissociation among the Elon Academy scholars based on class (Alpha, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Epsilon), (2) the scholars are forming relationships with one another during the Saturday programs and during the summer. They spend very little time together outside of these programs. (3) The groups within each of the five classes are based on gender and sexual orientation, and (4) most of the friend groups are initially formed within the dormitories. In many cases, friendships are not formed between roommates. Based on the research, it is suggested that the different classes to get to know each other and form relationships that could potentially last through high school and into college.

Living with people with similar interests, studying together, and having fun all define learning communities for Elon students. Elon boasts 19 learning communities, all surrounded by a particular theme from Service Learning and Sustainability to Fine Arts and Foreign Languages. This year, Elon added two new communities including Better Together: A Multi-Faith Community and Alcohol and Substance-free Housing for Elon Students. Being in an environment with like-minded people was one reason students joined a learning community. But these communities had more benefits. Students worked together on completing schoolwork, improving grades, and participating in many campus events. Ranging from competing in the engineer's cardboard boat race to taking trips to Washington D.C., students in learning communities expanded their environment beyond the walls of their dorm rooms. Freshman Katie Rasmussen joined the Math, Science, and Engineering Learning Community, and she was happy to surround herself with people with similar classes and interests. "My favorite part is that there are always a bunch of people in the common room doing the same homework you are doing, which makes it more fun to do," Rasmussen said. "Also I feel like these people have the same priorities as me and we get along very well. I would absolutely live in one again."

el Centro

El Centro de Español is Elon University's Spanish language center which provides students, faculty, and staff with the opportunity to continue their learning of the Spanish language and surrounding cultures out of the classroom. El Centro offers cultural events, conversation classes, and community service, in addition to the immersion environment that is always present in El Centro itself. Upon walking through the doors of El Centro, you find yourself in a different world where a staff of teachers and students from a variety of Spanish speaking countries add their unique versions of the Spanish language and culture to the immersion environment open to everyone on campus. Students log their hours of participation in El Centro events such as cooking classes, movie nights or the random Spanish board game, in hopes of earning the free plane ticket awarded to students with 140 hours in El Centro. El Centro offers students a unique experience to get a taste of immersion right here on campus, while working for a ticket to a Spanish-speaking country.

As Periclean Scholars, we are part of a national program dedicated to promoting complex awareness of global issues and creating meaningful partnerships that provide mutually enriching educational experiences and tangible solutions to discrete, locally defined problems. The Periclean program was introduced to Elon University in 2002 and groups of students have since traveled to regions across the globe, including Ghana, Sri Lanka, India, Mexico. The Class of 2014 is excited, however, to be the first of Elon's Pericleans to engage in a project within our own country in central Appalachia, with the help of our mentor, Ken Hassell, who has worked in Appalachia for many years. We will be collaborating with the community members of Whitesville, West Virginia and confronting a variety of issues in the area through research, interactions, partnerships, and conversations. In the Earl Hartwell family, catching the garter and bouquet is a full contact sport. All these silly rituals just seemed to make me tired. What was really the point? It was like people who believe in fairies and leprechauns. I couldn't even muster up the energy to try for the garter. As if to exemplify the idiocy, some sixteen-year-old, pimply faced kid catches it. A chant starts up, "Termite! Termite! Termite!..." No doubt a Moorby caught the garter. What a farce. I opted to get even better acquainted with Captain Morgan and coke.

"Mrs. Casey Flynn, your presence is requested up on the stage for the bouquet toss," the MC said. Casey made her way up on the stage, looking like white cotton candy, while the single women gathered in the hopes of catching their man. Casey turned her back to the gaggle and tossed the bouquet. ## h1honors fellows Conducting research as an undergraduate student was one of the most valuable experiences I had at Elon. Designing, analyzing, and presenting my honors thesis, which investigated the effects of audience and feedback on self-editing in writing, was challenging; I had to learn to solve complex problems on my own and take responsibility for every step of the process. Although it was a challenge at times, I am very grateful that I was able to do research, as it made me a better student and more confident to pursue other academic goals after graduation. It's strange - and very jarring - to realize that I will be finished with college in two short weeks, but I'm excited to see where I and my friends are going to end up. I'm looking forward to new experiences, whatever they may be, but that's not to say I won't miss Elon for all of the opportunities I've had here, including research.

University Relations

Throughout the school year, the Elon community comes together for the common spirit of competition as our friends and classmates fight for the number one spot on the field and court. Anyone can see the love the Elon community has for its athletes by the number of fans cheering in the stands. Varsity-level athletes work hard on and off the field as Student-Athletes, balancing rigorous workloads with strenuous practices and workouts. Non-Athletes usually see the result of the time, dedication and hard work that these Student-Athletes put into their craft. Sports are not just for varsity athletes, though. Students are able to compete in friendly competition through Club Sports with other schools and Intramural Sports among Elon students as well. Elon provides 26 club sports and 21 intramural sports for students to participate in. Through our athletics, students carry the spirit of our old mascot, the Fighting Christians, as we cheer and fight for our school. GO PHOENIX!

This past year, Elon Athletics pushed the slogan "Live the Maroon Life." I think that at Elon this phrase really resonates with fans because they can all identify with it in different ways. Some people Live the Maroon Life by literally wearing maroon, some support specific sports teams, and some see it as just a way to connect with the university. I Live the Maroon Life by supporting as many sports teams as possible whether it is by being in attendance at a game or by tweeting about an event I can't attend. I became an Elon sports fan because I was a member of Elon's marching band the Fire of the Carolinas. Yelling and cheering for our teams was just a ton of fun and it shows pride in your school. As someone who loves this university, I couldn't imagine not being a fan of our sports program no matter how big or small it is. Elon athletics has given me something that my Elon experience wouldn't have been complete without: being part of a team. EU YOU KNOW!

Well everyone, the time has come.

The time has come for all of us to leave this place that we have called home for the past 4 years. We have had some incredible experiences and met some amazing people along the way. As we count down the days towards graduation, I am sure all of us have taken one or two walks down memory lane. I think back to the day we first moved in. We were meeting all of our hall mates or suitemates for the first time and tried to predict how things would turn out.

As we all know, things never go as expected. But no matter what happened along the way our entire journey led to this moment, graduation. We have come full circle. We all started off on a similar path on our journey to Elon, and then we each went our own separate ways throughout our four years here. But we all come back together, at graduation, one last time as a family.

I walk down the sidewalk and see people that I have known since freshmen year. I look at them and each person has a story. Each one of them has a memory that is important to me and has affected my time here at Elon. Each person had a purpose for being here and there was a reason that we crossed paths when we did. Things fell into place, exactly how they should have.

So, enjoy your last few days here, because soon we will all be embarking on our own journeys. But don't forget to stop and think about your time at Elon, and everyone that you met while you were here. You may move away, but this place will always be here and these people will always be your friends. Stay connected, stay strong, but most importantly stay a family. Because that is what we are now, a family.

Thank you to the Class of 2012 for four amazing years at Elon.
All the best,

TAYLOR MARTIN | [senior class president]

graduation

Students, family, friends and Elon faculty and staff gathered on May 19th to celebrate the newest group who will join the ranks of Elon University alumni. Taylor Martin, president of the Class of 2012, said the occasion brought to memory the mixed emotions of move-in weekend and convocation their freshman year in August 2008, when his mother began to cry as she left him. "We have all become a family," Martin said. "The emotions I'm feeling now are the exact same she felt then," continuing on to describe the changing nature of life but consistency of family. Stephen Schuckebrook, Class of 1982, President of Dell Services and 2012 graduation speaker, said he skipped his own college graduation in a hurry to get on with his life, begin work and get married. Being present at this year's commencement, Schuckebrook said he would consider himself part of Elon University's Class of 2012. Citing the five C's to help enable the next generation to achieve greatness as convergence, critical thinking, character, conviction and courage, Schuckebrook reminded the graduates that they are well-prepared to make a difference in life. "Today, you are ready," he said. "A lot more ready than you thought. But we must shift from a society that is responsible for you, to one in which you are responsible for your society." Concluding his message to the graduates, Schuckebrook challenged them to make the most of what they do during their careers and life after departing Elon.

Brittney Baglino

We can't begin to tell you Brittney how proud we are of you. We've been blessed with the opportunity to watch you grow from an incredibly adorable small child to a beautiful young woman. You have achieved so much in such a short time that it's hard for us to keep track of it all. Only yesterday you were a just a cute chubby-cheeked little girl and today you are graduating college and running off into the real world. Though it may seem to you that it's taken forever to reach this point, it has happened all too quickly for us. We'll admit that it saddens us to see that this phase of your life has concluded, however it cannot compare to how happy and proud we feel knowing that you are so well prepared and dedicated to your dreams. Never lose sight of those dreams and never compromise anything to reach them. No matter what has happened in the past or what will happen in the future, always know that we will forever love you unconditionally and we will always be here for you cheering you on. Keep being the unique human being you are. You have unlimited potential. You have made us so proud and we know that you will continue to do so in your future.

Congratulations Brittney, you've made it to the next level. Now quit reading this and go make a difference!

We Love You!

[in global affairs]

As the entire globe moved into the ominous year of 2012, several major and sometimes ironic events rocked the world. Exactly a century after the sinking of the Titanic, an Italian cruise-line, Costas, sank off the coast of Italy. Following the death of Osama Bin Laden, American's remembered 9/11 on the tenth anniversary of the attack. The Arab Spring continued to grasp the media's attention, especially following the brutal end to Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi. American's voiced their displeasure with their own country's economic system in the Occupy Wall Street movement. American's also bid adieu to Apple tycoon Steve Jobs, pop-star Whitney Houston, and TV commentator Andy Rooney. Bizarre East Coast earthquakes, Hurricane Irene, and the Joplin Tornado's contributed to this year's odd natural events. However, for all the somewhat negative events the media always seems to focus on, the 2011-2012 did bring some things to celebrate. The Queen of England celebrated her 60th year on the throne. The economy is on the rise as 200,000 jobs have been added nearly monthly. People are also taking action of controversial topics such as gay marriage as certain states continue to pass new legislation. All in all, 2012 has brought the world a complicated but promising future.

HURRICANE IRENE

Hurricane Irene swept along the East Coast of the United States affecting a wide range of states from the South, up to the Northeast. Irene produced flooding and wind gusts that caused damage to many in its path. The storm disturbed 13 states and Washington, D.C. At one point, 8 million people were powerless.

August 6-12

RIOTS IN TOTTENHAM

Over four days, riots broke out in Tottenham, a city in north London. 2,000 people were arrested and five died as a result of the riots. Fires and looting occurred over the 4 days which started August 4th and even spread to nearby cities. A study is being conducted to figure out why the riots started.

August 27

WALTER REED ARMY MEDICAL CENTER CLOSES

The Walter Reed Army Medical Center closed at the end of August. Since its opening in 1909, soldiers and even several past presidents have spent time in the medical center. The decision to move was made so that there would be less facilities in order to help with and fit the military's needs.

10 YEAR ANNIVERSARY

This year marked 10 years since the terrorist attacks on our country on September 11, 2001. A memorial opened this year on September 12 which remembers those who lost their lives that day. Their names are inscribed in bronze around the two building sites. The sites, which were dug out, were transformed into waterfalls and reflecting pools. In the museum, artifacts from the towers have been saved and put on display as well.

OCCUPY WALL STREET

Liberty Square in Manhattan housed the Occupy Wall Street movement on the 17. Protesters are fighting against an unfair capitalist system, over powerful banks and against Wall Street for the recession that the American population had to endure. The movement was inspired by similar uprisings overseas in countries like Egypt.

MLK STILL STANDING TALL

Crowds gathered around the new Martin Luther King Memorial on Sunday, October 16, 2011 to honor the historic civil rights leader. The dedication ceremony was held in the National Mall where King's children and friends presented and spoke of his courage and his vision of racial peace and justice. Although King was a man of 5-foot-7-inches, the statue stands 30 feet tall and acts as a reminder of hope for peace and equality.

7 BILLION!

The U.S. Census Bureau set October 31, 2011 as the symbolic date for the world's population hitting 7 billion. Although it is impossible to know exactly when the world hit 7 billion, the world without a doubt is growing at an exceptionally fast pace. Hitting this new landmark indicates that governments must prepare for changes in order to supply for so many people.

The shape of the world's population

Where the world has grown

In 1950, the world's population had a much different face. Europe boasted eight of the world's 25 largest countries, a figure that would be cut in half in 60 years. During the same 60 years, Africa would become the world's second most populous region, more than tripling its head count. In the Western Hemisphere, Latin America surpassed its regional neighbor to the north. Asia, already in 1950 the world's most populous region, got even bigger.

Moving to the city

In addition to increased fertility in some parts of the world and longer life spans, another factor contributing to the world population's shape-shifting is urbanization. Since 1950, more and more people have migrated to the world's cities, increasing population centers. Projections show this trend continuing in many parts of the world

WACKY EARLY WEATHER

From Alaska to New England, the United States was hit hard with some wacky fall weather, leaving thousands of people in need of help. A huge nor'easter struck New England just in time for Halloween, so trick-or-treaters were sent trudging in their costumes through the snow. Over 3 million were left without power, some for nearly a week. Some areas broke October snow level records with recordings up to 30 inches. Oklahoma experienced a 5.6 earthquake and a tornado both on November 5. The earthquake was by far the biggest on state records, but fortunately did minimal damage to homes and roads. Alaska was not quite as lucky as it was hit with a severe winter storm of 90-mph winds and icy 20-foot waves. Residents experienced flooding, power outages and damage to coastal buildings.

DEATH OF GADDAFI

After months of tense fighting started by one of several Arab revolutions, the Libyan people finally found something to celebrate: the death of Muammar Gaddafi. On October 20, 2011, Muammar was killed in a gun battle in his hometown of Sirte. His violent death was circulated on the web and his body was put on display which prompted an investigation by the National Transition Council as some deem his end to be unnecessarily violent and brutal.

HONORING ONE OF TV'S GREATEST

The humorous "60 Minutes" commentator, Andy Rooney died on November 5, 2011 at the age of 92 due to complications following a minor surgery. He began his career over 33 years ago starting his career as an unlikely TV celebrity. However, his original and sometimes caustic commentary captured America and landed him among the stars.

The search for Earth-sized planets

NASA's Kepler mission has discovered the first Earth-sized planets that orbit a sun-like star outside our solar system.

Kepler-20e

Kepler-20f

Size 0.87 times Earth's radius : 1.03 times Earth's radius

Location • Both are in a five-planet system called Kepler-20, about 1,000 light-years away in the constellation Lyra
• Both are too close to their star to be in the habitable zone, where water could exist on their surface

Orbit Travels around its parent star every 6.1 days : Travels around its parent star every 19.6 days

Temperature 1,400 F (760 C); would melt glass : 800 F (427 C); similar to Mercury

Two of the first Earth-sized planets were found outside of our solar system by NASA's Kepler mission. Named Kepler-20e and Kepler-20f, they orbit a star similar to our sun, but too close to have water on the surface.

Across Antarctica

Felicity Aston, a 33-year-old British explorer, is embarking on a 70-day trek to become the first woman in the world to cross Antarctica alone.

Long trip

- Aston is pulling a sled of supplies; will resupply at the South Pole
- Boerge Ousland of Norway made a 64-day trip in 1997; he harnessed wind power by using a parachute-like sail; Aston using only man power

FIRST FEMALE SOLO JOURNEY ACROSS ANTARCTICA

Felicity Aston, a British explorer, was the first woman to ski alone across Antarctica. She began her 59 day trek on November 25 and travelled for 1,055 miles. Starting on the Ross Ice Shelf, she reached the South Pole and continued to the other side of Antarctica to reach the Ronne Ice Shelf where she was to be picked up. Her trip also raised money for the British Antarctic Monument Trust, which wants to build a monument to honor those who perished in Antarctica while there for scientific studies.

STATE OF THE UNION

In President Barack Obama's State of the Union Address, he spoke about the importance of equal opportunities for all and bringing the economy back to where everyone had an equal chance at getting by. He also added that he still wanted to work with the Republican party to help the American economy recover from previous hardships. Under President Obama's presidency, many jobs have been opened for American citizens in private sector jobs, manufacturing jobs and also in the auto industry.

GIANTS BEAT THE PATRIOTS

In this year's Super Bowl, the New York Giants beat the New England Patriots 21-17. The game was a rematch of the 2008 Super Bowl. Quarterback Eli Manning lead the Giants to their second Super Bowl victory over Tom Brady and the Patriots in five years. An estimated 111.3 million people tuned in, which beat last year's Super Bowl (111.0 Million) to become the most-watched television show in U.S. history.

The brutal economic downturn has made it difficult for old workers to find employment resulting in stressful retirement and even home foreclosures. However, the U.S. economy has added over 200,00 new jobs almost monthly this past spring. The additional jobs have caused the unemployment rate to hold steady at around 8.3 percent. These additions have resulted in a positive outlook for the U.S. economy which is said to be stable and continuing to recover from the recession.

AN IRONIC AND TRAGIC DEATH

On the eve of the Grammy Awards, one of the biggest pop singing sensations of all-time, Whitney Houston, was found dead in her room at the Beverly Hills Hilton. The 48 year old was said to have died from a drug overdose. Despite her tragic end, Houston will be remembered as one of the world's best-selling artists from the mid 80s through the late 1990s.

TRAYVON MARTIN'S KILLER PLEADS INNOCENT
Following the events of the Trayvon Martin murder, which occurred in February, George Zimmerman pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder of the Florida teen. His bail is set at $150,000 and he was released to wait for his next trial. The case not only raises racial issues, but also issues on the gun laws in Florida. The "Stand Your Ground" law allows for the use of deadly force when someone has a reasonable fear against another person who they may suspect may cause them harm.

PLAYER CONTROVERSY AFTER GAME 7 OF STANLEY CUP

After his game winning goal against the Boston Bruins in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup first-round playoff series, Barbadian Canadian hockey player Joel Ward may have received praise for winning the game, but he also received more negative and racist comments directed at him. On the Washington Capital's flight from Boston, one of Ward's teammates showed him some of the tweets and apologized. The Capital's owner Ted Leonsis, other Twitter users as well as the National Hockey League have voiced their disapproving thoughts on the tweets. By the next evening after the game, all but nine of the offensive tweets that had been recorded had been deleted.

ENTERPRISE'S LAST FLIGHT

The space shuttle Enterprise flew its last flight, ending up in its new home in New York City. The shuttle started its last flight in Virginia to end at the JFK airport. People stood below along the shuttle's path to watch as it flew piggy-backed on a modified 747 jumbo jet. It's final home is the Intrepid Sea, Air and Space Museum in Manhattan. It was created in 1976 as a prototype but the Enterprise never flew in to space, instead being used to fly in the atmosphere and for on-ground experiments. The museum plans to complete the Enterprise exhibit for its opening to the public in mid-July this summer. The other retired shuttles, Discovery, will take the Enterprise's place at the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., Endeavor, which is going to Los Angeles and Atlantis, which will remain at Florida's Kennedy Space Center are all a part of NASA ending its shuttle program.

NC AMENDMENT ONE PASSES

A constitutional amendment that defines marriage as between a man and a woman was passed in North Carolina, banning gay marriage in the state. North Carolina is the 30th state that has passed a constitutional amendment that banned gay marriage while only six states and Washington, D.C. allow it. President Obama's spokesperson Cameron French said that the President was disappointed that the amendment had passed. New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg spoke at UNC graduates and mentioned that the results of the vote shows that there is still much to be done for civil rights in America.

[in reflection]

A yearbook is way for students to reflect upon some of the greatest memories of their college experiences. For your convenience, Phi Psi Cli has continued the tradition of including an index to help you find the pages where you and your friends are featured. The staff spends several hours creating and perfecting the index, so we apologize for any incorrect identifications or misspellings.

The index is one tool to remember times at Elon, whether you flip through your yearbook right after graduation or years down the road. We hope you take the time to look back on all of the accomplishments of the year. You will be surprised to see where our photographers have caught you around Elon!

The 97th edition of Phi Psi Cli yearbook was produced by the 2012 Phi Psi Cli staff at Elon University in Elon, North Carolina. Taylor Publishing of Dallas, Texas printed 1,000 copies of the 224 page all-color book. The account was serviced by Milani Arguelles and local senior representative Shandi Foster. Free copies of the yearbook were distributed to students, faculty and staff and sent home to class of 2012 graduates at their request.

The theme "Rooted: Under the Oaks" was developed by editor in chief Lauren Needell and approved by the staff in Fall 2011. It was chosen because of its relationship to Elon and the image traditionally thought of in relation to Elon: the oak. Lauren Needell designed several cover samples and the yearbook staff, with the help of Shandi Foster and faculty advisor Randy Piland, voted on the cover design. The cover is hard. The binder board is .145. The endsheets are coated, one side white.

The 2012 edition covers June 2011 to May 2012. The book was created using Adobe InDesign CS5 on six Macintosh computers in the Priestley Building where the Phi Psi Cli office is located. Lauren Needell also developed the style guide for the book. All body copy was set in 12-point Minion Pro Regular. Captions were set in 10-point Myriad Pro Regular. Quotes were set in 11-point Minion Pro Regular. Photo captions were set in 5-point Minion Pro Regular. Most page headlines, the exception when constricted by space, were 72-point Myriad Pro Bold and the first letter of each word in 90-point. Byline names were set in 12-point Papyrus Regular. Byline titles and sections were set in 12-point American Typewriter Light. All pages were submitted to the plant online.

Each section of the book has been indicated by the use of a colored strip at the bottom of the page. These colors make up the color palette for the 2012 book. The colors were used to indicate the following sections: student life, academics, sports, seniors, news and index.

Lifetouch Studios of Burlington, NC photographed senior students in their caps and gowns on designated photo days throughout the year. Pictures on all pages were either take or obtained by a member of the Phi Psi Cli staff or were submitted by the member of the Elon community indicated.

The staff of Phi Psi Cli would like to thank all of those who made this book possible, including but not limited to: all students who submitted pictures and stories, the Media Board for their guidance and our advisor, Randy Piland, for his continued support and advice. Finally, we would like to thank our Balfour/Taylor representative, Shandi Foster, for being a mentor, advisor, and great friend. She believes in what she does and brings joy and enthusiasm to many yearbooks. Thank you all for all of your help.
